Colorado Water Roundtable Discussion Series

Water and Health – Emerging Contaminants; Impacts on Small Systems

July 23, 2009 • Denver, Colorado

Please join us for a rousing conversation on the impacts of emerging contaminants, such as endocrine disruptors, on small water and wastewater systems in Colorado. Come voice your opinion and hear from others. Don't miss a great way to start your day with tasty food and stimulating conversation. (And you can be back to work before the day has really begun.) The purpose of this format is to gather a small group of people into the same room at the same time who might not otherwise ever find themselves together to talk about important Colorado water issues.

TARGET AUDIENCE:

Watershed Associations, Small Systems, Educators, Regulators, Water and Wastewater Specialists, Consultants, Non-Profits, Local, State and Federal Agency Officials, Economic Development Specialists, Financial Institutions

JULY 23RD DISCUSSION FOCUS:

Emerging contaminants – what are the impacts and solutions for small water and wastewater systems? How can Colorado small systems prepare to mitigate new and emerging contaminant impacts?

To set the stage for this discussion on Emerging Contaminants:

Curt McCormick, CWA Consulting Services LLC, Pretreatment Specialist, is a member of the Consortium for Research and Education on Emerging Contaminants

Carol E. Lyons, Executive Director, Institute for Environmental Solutions, The Emerging Contaminants Project – Linking Science to Effective Action
